

WILLOW/HANK

WILLOW
Hank, what the hell are these?

HANK
Where did you/

WILLOW
/They were holding down the balloons.

Are these mortgage bills?

HANK
I was just keeping them in there till I had a chance to get around to them.

WILLOW
You mean you haven't paid them yet?

Half of these are past due notices.
And some of them are final notice.

HANK
No.
I paid those.
Those are good.
I make sure to get to those when they come in.

WILLOW
How often have we gotten those?

HANK
(...)

WILLOW
Hank, how far behind are we?

HANK
(...)

WILLOW
Hank!

HANK
Three months.

WILLOW
What?

HANK

But it's only temporary.

WILLOW

Three months?!

HANK

Once I get a new job down in the city and start making a little more money/

WILLOW

/What are you even talking about?
How did this happen?

HANK

I don't know.

WILLOW

You don't know?

HANK

Look, I told you it was gonna be tight when the paper started cutting back on hours.

WILLOW

Not this tight.

HANK

Well, maybe not if we didn't have a million other things to worry about.
Or if we had gone with the fixed rate back when we bought this place like I said we should.
But between the credit cards and the car payments and...this, it's just been hard, okay?
Which is why the budget/

WILLOW

/You really think the budget's gonna help us pay three months of back-mortgage?

HANK

(...)

WILLOW

Oh my God, we're gonna lose this place.